

Chapter I: "Going South With the Warblers" from Florida Trails

The narrator describes the discoveries that mark his journey southward to Florida. What are the things he encounters on his trip that surprise him?

He compares Florida to the Northern city of Cape Cod, Massachusetts. In what ways does he find them similar?

What are the differences that you can guess would distinguish Florida from the North?

Chapter I: "Going South With the Warblers" from Florida Trails

The narrator relates his tale by speaking of the various birds he encounters during the course of his travels. Use highlighting and marginal notes to keep track of the birds he describes during your reading. Then, choose one of the birds he encounters in Florida to research.

Divide a paper into two columns. In the first, write down all the information you learn about your chosen bird from the reading. In the second, use reference books or the internet to find additional facts about the bird.

Once you have completed your readings, write a one-page summary relating your findings about the bird, using both the facts from the reading, and your own research.
