

Chapter 6

The Professor

Mr. Hunsden tells William that he cares not about him, but that in the case of his brother's actions towards him, "I only consider the brutal injustice with which he violated your natural claim to equality." Do you consider this to be the truth? Why or why not? If it is untrue, then why would he say this?