

Chapter XL: "Hilda and a Friend"
The Marble Faun

Hilda has been portrayed throughout as one of great faith. How is her faith called into question here?

Contrast her feelings with those of Kenyon. Why do they feel such disparate things about the church?